

The critical path is red, this is based off of the number of stories to reach the end as most stories carried similar Fibonacci estimations. The priority of this sprint was completing the MVP key features that were still missing. A lot of the user stories intertwined but did not directly inhibit each other, thus we had a focus on consistently updating the individual branches when a story was merged into the develop branch, to ensure that there wouldn't be huge conflicts at the end. We also prioritized the key refactorings first as they had the greatest impact on the other tasks.